To whom it may concern;

Microsoft has already agreed to hide its Internet Explorer icon from the desktop; the fact is, this case against Microsoft is little more than "welfare" for Netscape and other Microsoft competitors, with not a nickel going to those supposedly harmed by Microsoft: the computer user.

I personally use the Netscape browser for most of my internet applications, so this really is just a grudge match or witch hunt, and needs to be brought to an end.

"This is just another method for states to get free money, and a terrible precedent for the future," states the AOCTP, "not only in terms of computer technology, but all sorts of innovations in the most dynamic industry the world has ever seen."

This economically-draining witch-hunt has gone on long enough. We need to let the Department of Justice know how we feel about the Microsoft Settlement.

Sincerely,
